Adobe Photoshop CC 2018 23.1.1.42097 Crack.rar word document. Internet Assets.com. Title: Adobe Photoshop (2017) 16.2 (85.1 MB) . The New York Times urges Washington to go to war with Russia New York Times and Wall Street Journal justify the U.S. intervention in the Middle East by arguing that Russia has been conducting military operations in Syria. The article says Russia's "provocations" have intensified to the point where the United States is bound to respond with force. Although the current hysteria about the Russian "threat" is not new, the striking thing about the New York Times article is how a number of commentators are using the anti-Russian campaign as an excuse to push Washington to war. The author of the Times piece, David E. Sanger, says that the United States should consider using military force to protect international navigation in the Mediterranean from Russian naval ships. "The Obama administration has resisted the suggestion that it take a harder line toward Mr. Putin, fearing that it would open a new front in the great power struggle between Russia and the United States," Sanger writes. He writes that if America does not step up, Russia will expand its influence in the Mediterranean, and America will have to get used to a Russia "with more influence in the global commons." Sanger even suggests that the United States should invest in a "10,000-ship Navy," which would be a costly exercise and would have the purpose of "protecting freedom of navigation for trade and oil transit through the strategically vital Sea of Oman." If this sounds like an echo of the U.S. Navy's "plan" for the Persian Gulf back in 2005, when U.S. warships were "present" in the region in order to "reinforce" American rights to the oil-rich Persian Gulf waters, that's because it is. The New York Times is not the only one who is using war hysteria to justify U.S. military intervention in Syria. The Washington Post wrote an article in April titled "Why the U.S. should intervene in Syria," and it began by calling for the American response to the alleged Russian "invasion" of Syria in August.
