Q: Facebook Advanced Display - Problems with line wrapping

Question I created a webapp where I have a list of items. The items can be booked and can have a lot of info about them. The info is div'ed up in the following way, with two line breaks between the item title and item description: // Title // Description

In the settings for the app I allow Facebooks Advanced Display to show this info. They love this method of displaying this info as it doesn't require the user to scroll. However, when there is a long description, it just show the text for the description cut off and not the text below the description. The important part is that the item is being listed on Facebook with:

CSS
.myitemid-description { line-height: 18px; }

The div containing the description is: Long description here

Does anyone know how to work around this problem? I can't seem to find a solution. Regards

Tobias

A: I've found a workaround, but it seems like a total hack and I'm not entirely happy with it: If you only have a little time So I mentioned in the last post that I
