From the time she was 18 months old, I heard from people about how she would be "a boy" when she was born. I am not bisexual, a cradle Catholic, or anything like that. I simply didn't want to use hormones. We are living in Iran and I was thinking of raising my daughter as a girl when she is 8 years old. My reason is that I'm afraid of rising rates of breast cancer in my culture. So, at the age of 8, I want to switch her to male gender. What are the effects of raising a child as a boy who is physically a girl at this age? A: Simply put, it will be quite normal for a child to change gender by puberty. And there are no medical reasons that would preclude a transgender individual from puberty if they so choose. The only thing you need to be aware of is that there is no magic age at which you should look to make a choice one way or another, and that the longer you wait, the harder it may become for your child. There are many reasons to choose to let your child live as their true self; they have their reasons and they will not change their minds. I can't speak for all people, but personally, I have never met a transgender person that didn't wish they had been born with a different body. A: You definitely cannot change your kid's gender during infancy, as the child would need to be raised as the opposite sex in order to become that sex. The only thing that can change the gender is puberty, which normally happens in the teens. Should patients with metabolic syndrome be treated with anti-diabetic drugs? Metabolic syndrome is a common disorder characterised by the co-existence of three or more of the following: obesity, insulin resistance, dyslipidaemia and hypertension. Current treatments for metabolic syndrome aim to improve glycaemia, blood pressure, cholesterol and triglyceride levels and to ameliorate body weight in order to reduce mortality from cardiovascular disease (CVD) and other chronic diseases. In clinical trials, the reduction of IObit Driver Booster Pro 6.5.0.421 Registration Key allows you to update both Active X and Active Scripting..Q: updating a wordpress database with a function from a plugin I created a plugin which adds a field to a database when a specific page is visited. On one of my hook actions I need to update the field in a wordpress database. But i can't seem to get the connection between my function and the database - whenever i try to update a field I get this error: Fatal error: Call to undefined function somefunction() Now I understand that I will need to somehow use the wordpress admin functions in my plugin to do this, but I can't seem to figure out how! Here is my code :

do_action('somefunction', $someid); And in a hook file: function somefunction() { global $wpdb; $wpdb->update('table', array('a' => 'foo'), array("a = 'foo'", array("ID = $someid")); } So, I guess what I am asking is, how would I make my function use the admin functions of wordpress in order to update a certain column in a database. A: global $wpdb (global scope) is not what you need. $wpdb->update($wpdb->prefix. 'table', array('a' => 'foo'), array("a = 'foo'", array("ID = $someid")); Also, if your code is in a plugin, you can disable the hook and redirect it to another page in your plugin (can't remember if this works or not, but it should be close) function somefunction() { global $wpdb; if(!current_user_can('edit_post')){ $wpdb->query("update table set a = 'foo' where ID = ". $someid);
