Tolerance.Data.2009.2.CRACKED.Full.rar! 2022 Crack.Q: How to render a view that display data from other view using ember js? I am currently doing a simple emberJS app using rails as a backend. I tried to find a solution online but didn't got yet. This is my problem : 1- I got an index.html.erb that display a list of elements. 2- I got a view named comments.js.erb that use an AJAX to query my API. 3- I got another view named comment_template.js.erb that will display the data from the comment table. But I got stuck at here, how to render the comment_template.js.erb file so as to display the data in my index.html.erb. Any idea? Thank you in advance for your response. A: Rendering views is really easy when you have a simple template engine, like Handlebars. There are all sorts of tutorials explaining how to do this. For instance: `{{comment.comment}}` Then in your routes file or an action helper that renders the page: `var App = Ember.Application.create({}); App.Router.map(function() { this.resource('comments'); });` And then in a route `App.IndexRoute = Ember.Route.extend({ renderTemplate: function() { this.render('comments'); } });` A very simple approach that gets you 95% of the way there. However, if you need to manage updating/composing the views that you are rendering, you will need to use a more advanced templating system like mustache. Also, you might find backbone.js to be easier to work with for this kind of simple setup. Q: Electron Framework (C
