We use the old naming scheme for two reasons. First, the sample files in # the repository are all named accordingly. This is because they are build # from source files, which doesn't support a build-without/distribution/sample # specifier. # Second, the PDB sample files have a manual build step available, which is a # bit slower than normal build. However, using the old naming scheme # automatically reproduces the PDB build process for us. # # For examples, see # /Volumes/Sandbox/Stage2/Pdb/human/1-rep/initial-pdb/fit1d.pdb # /Volumes/Sandbox/Stage2/Pdb/human/1-rep/initial-pdb/str.pdb set_property(GLOBAL PROPERTY PG_USE_TILES 1) add_file_to_project(1.3/server.cpp) add_file_to_project(1.3/client.cpp) add_object_to_library(1) # For efficiency-related reasons, we rename the store to store_* configure_target(1.3/store.dll store_samples) configure_target(1.3/store.pdb store_samples.pdb) # target/distrib/store.props: New file, generated by MoveDirectory

[Elasticity and rheometry of gelatin from agar-agar and pectin]. Elasticity and rheological properties of gelatin from agar-agar and from pectin were studied. A model of gel is proposed for studying the rheological characteristics of gelatin. The model is based on the periodic changes of gel in terms of the elasticity and viscosity. A procedure of producing gel was developed. The required parameters of the gel (elasticity, viscosity, etc.) have been determined. The results obtained have been used to analyse the interrelation between the elasticity and rheological properties of gelatin from agar-agar and from pectin.
